

MANIFESTO

Ten years ago, we were the first, we were the driving force.

At Renault Trucks, we had one truly electrifying goal: to see electric trucks in the streets to give cities a breath of fresh air.

While we were sharing our expertise to create a range of high-performance vehicles and charging facilities, other people were sharing gardens.

While our French-made trucks were going from the factory to the field, local produce was going from the field to the fork.

While we were honing our expertise in electro-technology, city dwellers were seeking alternate currents.

While we were upskilling our network in electro-mobility and obtaining accreditation, local politicians were taking the first steps towards creating a sustainable city.

Today in our cities, more and more businesses and ordinary people are rallying to the cause of those who have switched to a more virtuous form of power, opening up new horizons.

Ten years ago, we were in the driving seat.

Today, we can boast a range of tried and tested electric trucks, bolstered by a robust network and seasoned experts.

Ten years later, you are in the driving seat.

What are you waiting for?
